I believe drawing is different when working with still-life and imagination. When working with still-life, you have a reference, and you know what the outcome is supposed to look like. Whereas when working with imagination, you have artistic freedom. My definition of drawing means to create an image from the use of lines. My definition of art means having the opportunity to share self-expression while incorporating talent and skills. Drawing is important in our modern lives and culture because it is a way to show representation and to connect with one another.
